Comments: More parking would be understandable but more cabins? Absolutely not. This is supposed to be an area where you can enjoy the water or the hike for the day not glamp inside of a cabin and take up space. If anything, adding more campsites for the people who enjoy real camping who can no longer find a spot in many of the lake areas in this region would make more sense. I also can't believe this area is being taken over by a company that doesn't even reside in this state. I assume that there are multiple organizations in Montana that know the area and know that this lake is a natural beauty. Adding these ridiculous cabins will be detrimental to the calm and tranquility that is this lake.

I've been hiking and swimming in this area for 22 years which is my entire life. As a Montanan I can't bare to see this land destroyed for what? Out of staters to get more money? Haven't they destroyed enough already? They don't get the small town culture and the simplicity that comes with the outdoors and how much of that you lose when you spend it inside of a temperature regulated cabin. Or when you have the convenience of eating at a restaurant right off the lake instead of enjoying what the nearby town of Seeley has to offer.

In summary you should add more parking and/or more camping sites not luxury cabins for people to stay in and make it so those that have enjoyed the lake for years can no longer do because they can't afford to. Stop making things only available to the elite!! (And letting out of state companies profit off of our state)
