Comments: There are so few mature forests left in our country it is a shock to me that anyone would decide that invasive species infested young forests are somehow preferable, even though where I live that is 99% of the forest because its all been logged already. But I know that argument that jellico needs more young forests is actually a smokescreen to cover up the forest service and loggers just trying to line their pockets selling off a public treasure for profit. Destroying the land of your people will impact every generation for decades to come, and I invite you all to use wisdom and decide to NOT log this forest.
