Comments: As an individual who values our state and national forests and wild lands, I'm writing in opposition to the proposed logging project in the Jellico forest. The proposed clear cutting creates far more risks than benefits. Erosion, flooding, loss of habitat are just a few. Selective logging this is not. I'm also highly concerned with the use of herbicides and the effect the drift will have on life unintentionally targeted.

It seems to me that there is a much more balanced way of working with the forest. Clear cutting is an outdated method. Killing a forest to protect it makes no sense. The damage to the environment with this proposal outweighs the benefits to the forest, the environment, and the life living within and around this land.
