Comments: Dear fellow inhabitants,

Look back into mining history and find an example that was actually good for the environment. Mines leave nothing but gaping wounds on the earth that ooze out toxins, not to mention the toxins imported for the processing of the material extraction. Yes this site needs to be cleaned up, preferably by the one's who made the mess. Mining interests will tell you anything in order to get permission to continue to injure the planet. Please do not allow this to continue on. It's not good for nature nor humanity. What are a couple of flakes of gold really worth anyway?
