Comments: Me and many others would be mainly interested in natural trails, some directional for MTB and some not. Mainly a multi use trail that is setup for uphill MTB and hiking along with a steeper and rougher mainly downhill MTB trail. Connecting trails would be nice. Fire roads to connect and climb on are ok. Equestrian use prohibited or only allowed at certain times of year to prevent trail destruction, ie when soil is moist. Trails start or end at the top of a MTB peak or lookout area. Switch backs if needed are not ridiculously tight. Good line of sight along with turns every 500-1,000'. Don't make it too smooth, keep it natural and incorporate natural terrain features and soil types when possible.

I probably hike 40% and MTB 60% of the time. I don't own one but make electric mountain bikes ok, they are not a hazard or destructor of the trails more than any other group.
