Comments: To whom it may concern,

Please consider halting the propose land swap for the east side of the Crazy Mountains. This has been a long fought battle to save access for the public. The proposed swap does exactly the opposite of preserving access. The loss of multiple access points and trails would be a tremendous blow to the common user. Montana is at a clear tipping point when it comes to public land management - we can either become like Texas and side with the wealthy, or we can choose to represent the people of the state and keep public access intact.

"Once it's gone, it's gone forever."

Sincerely,

Kitt Daly
