Comments: As a local in Bend, Oregon, i am very excited about the new Lemon Gulch project. I love having so many accessible trails so close to town and I'm sure the town of Prineville will feel the same way once the lemon gulch project is finished. Peak summer time on the trail in central Oregon can be a little heavy with traffic and it'll be nice to have another trail system within an hour's drive to go to on the busy holiday weekends. There is no doubt that I will take advantage the new trails when I know our local trails here and bend are jammed packed with tourist and out of towners. I'm also excited about exploring the town of Prineville sense it's so close to the new trails. I love grabbing a beer and something greasy post ride and I hope Prineville has some tasty pub food to fit the bill. Working in a bike shop and on a trail crew ive come to understand how important mountain bikes and cyclists alike are good for a growing community. With each new trailhead there comes a great opportunity for people to visit the area and spend their money at local small business. Weve all heard of the success stories like Oakridge and Downieville. My hope is that Prineville will be the next small town that mountain bikers put on their bucket list.
