Comments: I read an article that states the current public land has much better habitat for wildlife. If this is true, I'd much rather see the right of ways more clearly marked than swapping land. The people who can afford outfitters and private land access have plenty of opportunity. Having a right of way trail does nothing to harm private landowners except for in their own imagination. I have not come to Montana because I can not find maps that show access to public land, but I'd certainly like to visit. This deal would make it less likely that I do. Do not sacrifice quality of public land for the complaints of a couple landowners.
