Comments: As both a Big Sky resident and a frequent hiker and fisherman in the Crazy Mountains, I am strongly supportive of the proposed land swaps. The new public land in the Big Sky area meaningfully expands public hiking access and useable land in exchange for largely unusable rocky, high-elevation terrain. The Crazy Mountain land swaps are an outstanding advance toward much simpler public access and better hiking trails in the Crazies. This swap is addressing a particularly complex checkerboard of ownership which has hurt public access in the Crazies. Providing indigenous tribal access to Crazy Peak is also a great move. I applaud the long and complex collaboration that has been required of many parties to bring these lands swaps to potential fruition and believe they provide significant advantages for the public use of these lands.
