Comments: It appears that the impacts on wildlife and fish habitats are being ignored. The plan to haul hazardous materials on the highway 55 corridor is just asking for trouble. As with all of the mountainous roads, there is an inherent risk of rockslides, but coupled with the addition of the increasing traffic due to the influx of people makes it all the more dangerous.

I cannot fathom the thought process our decision makers had when they even thought that having a huge hole in the ground, devastating impacts on wildlife, and creating a harmful environment for all the people would be good for Idaho.
