Comments: The American people deserve better than to be swindle by the ultra wealthy, and the USFS has a responsibility to protect historical access and use of OUR land. I have worked around and for the Yellowstone Club over the past 8 years and to categorize their wishes as being "fair" or "community minded" is an insult to human intelligence. They clearly stand to benefit far more than the people who will lose public corridors to THEIR land. Are we fools to believe a proposal by the YC would possibly benefit anyone but themselves?

This proposal is limiting the use of public land while transferring public land with a high value to the people that need it the least. It will leave a legacy to be embarrassed about. If the Club was true to its word the American people wouldn't lose access, lose mineral rights, and help consolidate lands with extreme high value. They look at us as peasants, servants, and barriers to their domination of all resources they can wrap their greedy hands around.

Sounds a little far fetched, eh? Well spend some time working for the Yellowstone Club and tell me how you feel after you peel back the public veneer, and see the seedy under belly of an organization comprised of people who truly believe they are better than the common Man.

Deny all requests until the deal is fair and tips in the People's balance. It's us they look to exclude right? So the people should get the better deal. More roads, trails, and a lopsided wind fall for the American People would be the just way to transfer our wealth to the greedy developers circling the waters.
