Comments: As a resident of Melville and a landowner, I support the blocking up of federal/private land, but I do not support the installation of the new trail. One thing that makes the Crazy Mountains special is it's not developed with trails. This new trail will go through rough country. Why battle the landscape and tear up this special land with a trail? If people are fit enough to travel the proposed trail, they would be able to travel the same area without a trail. I

I want to express how supportive I am of the blocking up of federal land and cleaning up the checkerboarding. It just makes sense and should be replicated wherever there is checkerboarding of private and federal/state lands. I also want to commend all that were a part of this grassroots effort to come up with constructive solutions to long standing issues. Its inspiring that a group of adversaries were able to come to the table, find common ground and be respectful of each other when there were those who tried to intimidate the process by using their own jealousy, hate, spite and misinformation to try to obstruct positive solutions and progress.
