Comments: I have concerns about the Stibnite Gold project specifically along these lines:

1. Transportation: How much trucking traffic and dangerous materials will be transported along what routes? How close does transportation get to roadless wilderness areas?

2. Fish Habitat: We're already battling a disintegration of fish populations in Idaho and the West. How can we be assured that this project won't further deteriorate these fragile and essential species?

3. Climate Change and Cleanup: What factors of real climate change have been calculated into the formula for mine cleanup down the road? What is the timeframe of the eventual cleanup. How are we assured the mining areas will be left better than they were found?

I urge you to exercise the utmost caution in preventing long term damages to Idaho's precious land and water. How is this short term venture worth it in the long run?

Thank you.
