Comments: The big picture is that there is NO wilderness left. Not really. The air is changed by warmer temperatures and air pollution. The waters are changed with warmer temps too but also invasive species, lack of native flora and fauna. The lands are changed from vast logging in the past and some current as well as reckless mining previously. There are many fewer bears and mountain lions; changing the balance of power with grazers. And on and on and on. With so little wilderness-like areas still in USA...we owe it to ourselves to take better care of the little that does remain. We owe it to the future. Please do not this massive polluting get rich for a few at the expense of all of the rest of us debacle ! It is time to take care of the riches of wilderness that will NEVER be allowed to return if we allow it to be spoiled now.
