Comments: To whom it may concern;

The Breckenridge ski chair lift proposal is gross capitalism at its finest. The idea that a private company should be able to ask for federal land for a money earning venture that will not be publicly accessible, is exactly why this proposal should be denied.

The ski and snowboard industry will not escape the rapid changing of the climate, and this ski lift will destroy the natural landscape of this planet further. Let's leave this land for the people. A redesign that is lower impact on the environment is an opportunity to create jobs that are more long term sustainable. Surely a company that charges $216 for simple access to a mountain can find enough money and ingenuity to not destroy more land for the private enterprise.
