Comments: As an Idahoan, sportsman, and outdoor recreation who loves Idaho's unspoiled wilderness, I can't voice my opposition to this mining project loud enough. Those who don't learn history are doomed to repeat it, as they say. This project would inevitably have hugely negative ecological impacts that will leave tax payers cleaning up while Perpetua rakes in their earnings. There could be no benefit to this mine that outweighs the cons. What makes this proposed mine even more insulting is the fact the Stibnite project is still being cleaned up. Not by the mining company, but the Nez Perce tribes and private citizens who care infinitely more than a mining company with a bottom line ever could.

The fact that the project would cut in to one of the greatest land preservation wildernesses ever created is even more dubious. Please reject the Perpetua Resources proposal and let them know the reason our wildernesses are protected is to keep companies like Perpetua from destroying our river systems and heritage.
