Comments: It is estimated that we have now used or destroyed at least 70% of usable lands. Our greed has successfully started us on a collision course with our own demise, taking with us, every species that depends on water and sunlight and clean air to live. It's past time to stop allowing the destruction and pollution to continue, in the name of whatever drives greed or even need of the human race. A race that is overpopulating this small planet at an alarming rate. It is therefore, imperative that those humans in charge of allowing or stopping destruction and pollution, grow a pair and say no. Enough! This is one such time and there needs to be no roads and much clean up. Do the right thing, not the easy thing. It is so important to save what we still have.
