Comments: There are places in the western landscape that should be preserved for generations to come because their beauty and heritage is unparalleled. The South Salmon headwaters is such a place. Pristine waters for salmon habitat, beautiful terrain for exploring, enjoying the wildness and a canyon rich with history and world class whitewater. Letting this area be developed so that a few people at the top can make their fortune does not make sense. The tradeoff is transparent -- serving a handful of people determined to reap the canyons for money with no concern beyond their own greed. Please consider this area as a sanctuary for people that should be preserved in perpetuity for all humans.
