Comments: The Salmon River is a magical place that I've had the privilege of visiting on rafting trips. It is valuable not only in intrinsic beauty, but also in wildlife habitat and outdoor recreation, which is a multi-billion dollar industry. Although this area has been impacted by historical mining, we do not need a new mine to restore it. New mining activities along the Salmon River would cause devastating ecological impacts to the area and threaten water and air quality for local communities.

I oppose allowing the Stibnite Gold Project to proceed as proposed because it will cause irreversible harm to water quality, wildlife, public health, and a sustainable outdoor recreation-based economy and pollute the area for generations to come. This project needs to be significantly revised or stopped."
