Comments: Organized , planned mountain bike and multi use trails would be amazing and a great benefit to the area using our PUBLIC lands. Some people don't like change and want things to stay the same forever even as our populations grow and the want and need for recreation in our National Forests continues and evolves around the country. There are many benefits to our economy and to the health of our population when projects like there are planned out and completed. For way to long and obviously today a small few have had a big voice about the use of our PUBLIC LANDS, livestock leases and the people who rent our land for a ridiculously low price for many years say out loud that its there land and they don't want this or that or anything interfering with there land. This makes me furious to say the least. Again I think a well planned out use of our land to benefit a large group of users is a great benefit to the forest and the people of the area and visitors. I hunt ,hike, bike , ski and do every outdoor activity available and am so grateful for the area and forest we get to call our home and playground. I also work on trails with local bike groups and National Forest projects , some multi day camping projects. People who do nothing and flap there yap about how they want everything to stay primitive should take a walk in the millions and millions of acres of forest we have available where they can go and never see another person maybe forever.
