

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 2/6/2023 5:18:09 PM

First name: John

Last name: Schwinghammer

Organization:

Title:

Comments: As a USFS interpreter/naturalist at the MGVS for seven years, I listened to literally hundreds of comment from visitors and Juneau locals alike regarding "improvements." The general consensus was typically less-is more, or simply, "Why?" As my wife and I are also National Forest/National Park visitors in other regions, we often wonder why certain changes were made to the natural landscape and its necessity. Looking out at the sweeping views of the Grand Canyon, do we really need a guided tour to explain to us why a sunset there is beautiful? Most visitors do not come to experience upgrades or conveniences of which they have nothing prior to compare with. I feel Laurie Craig, in her recent Juneau Empire editorial summed it up for many locals by stating that a million plus visitors spend an hour at the MGVS, while the backdrop of the Mendenhall Glacier seen through our patio doors is an everyday experience that we do not want to see tampered with. Let it be!