Comments: USFS is required to review conditions of a land every 5 years. This includes GMNF and the 2006 Forest Plan. Monitoring and evaluation may indicate immediate changes needed, either by amendment or revision.

Has this been done? If so, what did this monitoring show in regard to heavier rains, erosion, and downstream siltation?

Has this evaluation shown the increased capacity of old growth trees to store carbon, and the benefits of letting trees die naturally, adding nutrients to the forest soils?
