Comments: Vermont is my home, I have been running and playing in Vermont Forrests since the first time I could walk. The rivers are my blood, the trees are my air, the soil is my bones. If you willingly destroy 12,000 acres of wilderness, not only are you worsening the rapidly changing climate, you are destroying Vermont's identity as the green mountain state. This will dry up our rivers, weaken our land, and dirty our air. This one gap may seem like a small part of Vermont, but if this gets approved, what will stop them from moving to the rest of Vermont? From moving to my home in Addison County. I love Vermont more than anything in the world, and if logging operations continue to be approved, rampantly obliterating countless acres of Forrest, Vermont will cease to e exist.
