Comments: Timber Sales of old-growth and mature trees must STOP. Our planet desperately needs the ecological services provided best by a standing forest. Climate change is here - we can never replace 80 to 150-year-old trees.

We have to reboot our thinking about trees.

I am an avid backpacker. The woods are my solace. My son is a ranger with the US Forest Service. He has witnessed thousands of individuals and groups basking in the splendor of our forested preserves. Beyond biodiversity, water retention, and carbon sequestration, people derive pleasure and mental health rejuvenation from an intact landscape.
