Dear Project Lead:

The wife and I almost disperse camp 90% of the time. We already have the Pinnacles on our list this spring. I think it would be better for the USFS to improve the road, by gravel and proper grading. That alone would help keep people on the roads. The idea of adding stock tanks and a water line will do more damage to the land than the dispersed camping. Maybe you have not seen what cattle do to the ground around a stock tank, the damage is more than dispersed camping. There is almost 21,000 linear feet of road, with only 70 sites that is 300 feet apart! A better use of USFS money would be gravel and grade the road, and nothing else.
