Comments: One of our greatest resources in Vermont are the intact forests, and the few stands of old growth trees that can be found. Sequestering carbon, creating habitat for wildlife and honoring our elders are all good reasons to protect these rare trees. The telephone gap project, and the offensive logging being done in the Robinson land management area seem to be steps backwards in our state. As a Vermonter, a parent, and friend, I encourage all of us to take part in protecting the tiny percentage of old trees we have spared. Please count my voice among those that want to see mature stands of trees protected, not compromised. sincerely, Robert Schelling.
