Comments: Team, I appreciate that the Forest Service, as a subordinate organization to the Department of Agriculture, is tasked to manage forestland as a resource from which economic benefit is derived. But I'm equally appreciative of the work the USFS does to conserve forestland for ecological sustainment. The science on old-growth forest is becoming increasingly clear: more is better, not less. One need not be a forester to understand that equation. Please, err on the side of conservation here vice economy.
