Comments: Here is a poem that illustrates how our world nears Apocalypse and how we continue to spur it on. I urge you, with the aid of this poem by Franny Choi, to resist the world ending, to resist cutting off our limbs. We as humans are connected with these forests, these trees, so by cutting them, you are also limiting our own ability to move and breathe. Please do not move this project forward. Please listen, as this poem reminds us how we have stopped listening to the hum of the trees. It is unjust.

"The World Keeps Ending, and the World Goes On" BY FRANNY CHOI

Before the apocalypse, there was the apocalypse of boats: boats of prisoners, boats cracking under sky-iron, boats making corpses bloom like algae on the shore. Before the apocalypse, there was the apocalypse of the bombed mosque. There was the apocalypse of the taxi driver warped by flame. There was the apocalypse of the leaving, and the having leftof my mother unsticking herself from her mother's grave as the plane barreled down the runway. Before the apocalypse, there was the apocalypse of planes. There was the apocalypse of pipelines legislating their way through sacred water, and the apocalypse of the dogs. Before which was the apocalypse of the dogs and the hoses. Before which, the apocalypse of dogs and slave catchers whose faces glowed by lantern-light. Before the apocalypse, the apocalypse of bees. The apocalypse of ?buses. Border fence apocalypse. Coat hanger apocalypse. Apocalypse in the textbooks' selective silences. There was the apocalypse of the settlement and the soda machine; the apocalypse of the settlement and the jars of scalps; there was the bedlam of the cannery; the radioactive rain; the chairless martyr demanding a name. I was born from an apocalypse and have come to tell you what I know-which is that the apocalypse began when Columbus praised God and lowered his anchor. It began when a continent was drawn into cutlets. It began when Kublai Khan told Marco, Begin at the beginning. By the time the apocalypse began, the world had already ended. It ended every day for a century or two. It ended, and another ending world spun in its place. It ended, and we woke up and ordered Greek coffees, drew the hot liquid through our teeth, as everywhere, the apocalypse rumbled, the apocalypse remembered, our dear, beloved apocalypse-it drifted slowly from the trees all around us, so loud we stopped hearing it.
