Comments: Privatizing public land that has been used for education, conservation, and the joy of the public for a profit is misguided at best, but most transparently greedy. This land does not belong to the state or to any private organization, but to people and nature. We respect and value our civil servants that have maintained and protected in the past, and it would be an act of selfishness to hand it to one who only hopes to take advantage of the people and the nature.
