Comments: As a citizen of Pagosa Springs, I understand the need for gravel to fix our roads and reduce potholes. However, I don't agree that Jackson Mountain is the optimal location for a gravel pit. I feel that more research needs to be done about plausible locations for said gravel pit. Jackson Mountain is a very popular area for many recreationalists, and having a gravel pit interfere with that might cause some problems. The Jackson Mountain roads are very skinny, and it might be hazardous for large equipment to be sharing the already small roads with locals and tourists. Additionally, the gravel pit could interfere with existing trails, and cause conflict between recreationalists. In conclusion, I think a local gravel pit is necessary, but more research should be done about the location.
