Comments: This work could really help alleviate issues in Cutis Canyon. While I am not excited about adding .68 mi to my hike when I go to Goodwin Lake or hike up Jackson Peak, I understand the need to redirect the trail. I also understand that the campground needs to be expanded. Gone are the days when one could drive out of town and take the kids to that campground on Friday afternoon for quick getaway. My biggest concern is that there is no plan for a trail taking people from over 30 campsites to the trail head. They will either walk on the new road or drive. That would make the 12-vehicle planned parking area become full very quickly and would most likely be filled with the campers. This would limit access for day hikers. Could there be any way to direct hikers from the campground to the Goodwin Lake trailhead by foot limit them driving to it? If you have visitor data that suggests the campers would not head to the Goodwin trailhead, please share. Thanks for all of your efforts in planning this project.
