Comments: Regarding: Telephone Gap Integrated Resource Project #60192.

On an issue like this, it's incredibly important to know the whole story, what people's concerns are, and what issues they're dealing with on all sides. That's one way you come up with innovative solutions. Because where's it going to leave you all if you collectively don't figure things out?

If you can, can everyone, remain open to learn something new, and if you're actively listening to all sides it's possible to change the dynamic.

Given that the project is getting a lot of push back, it seems like some deep communication, and listening could be useful.

Researching, and separating out things that sound likely from things that are actually true and fact based seems necessary before any cut proceeds.
