Comments: There's already been too much logging in the Green Mountain National Forest. This is public land and it shouldn't be used for profit anymore. The forest should be left alone for nature and for recreational use that doesn't disturb the land. It feels like the Forest Service has forgotten that it is supposed to protect the forest and not cut it down. This is wrong and it needs to stop. The Green Mountain National Forest should remain untouched for the benefit of wildlife, people, and future generations. Logging this precious forest only serves one purpose: making a profit for corporations. This money-making scheme cannot be allowed to continue at the cost of nature.

We need to stand up against these greedy companies and reclaim what is rightfully ours-a beautiful, wild, natural forest!
