

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/11/2023 8:01:37 AM

First name: David

Last name: Vought

Organization:

Title:

Comments: If you want wild sheep and goats on the mountain you must ensure separation between the domestic and wild populations. Wild populations cannot tolerate diseases that are carried by domestic livestock. It is also important to maintain a buffer between the wild and domestic populations to prevent disease transmission. Once disease from domestic livestock is introduced to the wild population the disease will inevitably spread through the wild population with deadly consequences.