

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/11/2023 7:00:04 PM

First name: Elinor

Last name: Osborn

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Our planet cannot afford to lose carbon storage contained in 12,000 acres of national forest. Keeping carbon storing trees and soils are some of the best means of offsetting global warming. Intact vast forests are not common and we need to keep them not only for carbon storage but also for all the unique plants and animals living in them and the corridors that the animals and plants need for travel which is necessary to exist with global warming.