Comments: I have been involved with wild sheep issues for over 30 years

I am currently a director of the Utah chapter of the Wild Sheep Foundation.

It is well established that the greatest threat to wild sheep is pathogens carried by domestic sheep.

There is no cure. Historical herds of wild sheep were nearly wiped out, primarily by disease. Their recovery has taken place largely because of extreme efforts to separate them from domestic sheep.

Please do not undo all that has been accomplished through considerable effort and expense. The facts are well documented and obvious.

Thank you
