

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/12/2023 5:41:04 AM

First name: Bret

Last name: Friel

Organization:

Title:

Comments: It blows me away that sheep are still allowed to be grazed ANYWHERE on our public national forests where they may interact with and spread disease to wild bighorn sheep, which are all endangered species in this country. How has this issue not been addressed decades ago? Sheep herders are not entitled to graze on public lands at the expense of this species and the rest of us. If it doesn't work, it doesn't work. I also don't think we need countless tax dollars spent trying to develop some complicated strategy to try and make it work either. We're talking about a few sheep herders...a very tiny segment of any community that has had an immeasurable negative impact on the wildlife. sheep should be raised out east where there are no wild sheep. It shouldn't even be a point of discussion, it should be a done deal!