Comments: I have come to realize after 40 years of living in Vermont that trees (and culverts) mean everything, and old growth forests mean even more...to the climate, to the economy of Vermont, to the essence of what Vermont is as a place. I get that the timber industry is important, but there must be some way to both meet the needs of that industry while also encouraging the growth of old forests. In fact, I am sure there is...and I would encourage our government through the Forest Service to make the extra effort to find it. Thank you.
