Comments: I am concerned about the future of the world for my two grandchildren, ages 16 and 14. It is my understanding that old forests absorb and store 50% of the above-ground carbon worldwide and that New England's forests have some of the largest and most important concentrations of carbon-dense older forests in the US. I feel that the need to keep our old trees standing in our national forests is immediate. Please do not log the trees in Vermont's Green Mountain National Forest so that my grandchildren and all future generations will have a viable world to live in.
Thank you.
