Comments: It is madness to be considering cutting down old-growth trees in Vermont at a time when the survival of our Earth depends on such trees as these for healing.

We must respect nature's process of breathing, using trees for purifying the air and lowering the temperature.

Trees provide habitats for birds, animals and other living beings.

Trees are themselves living beings that provide a sense of home to humans who come into their presence.

Please, do not add to more ecological destruction and climate chaos.

Simply let the trees be.
