Comments: Please don't log these beautiful forests, we need pristine natural wildlands, which most of Vermont upholds and retains, and in fact has become an icon of. Biodiversity matters for the future of humankind. Countless plants provide the medicines needed to restore health - for animals and humans. The trees themselves provide the soul medicine needed for us in troubled times. You will destroy the natural beauty and charm of this great state, damaging tourism and the local economy. It's a bad move, and I vehemently oppose it. You must find other ways to fund the projects the money from the timbering would generate. The Forest Service should protect the great forests of our nation, not profit from them.
