Comments: I wholeheartedly am in opposition to this proposed mass deforestation plan. Vermont is so well known for its natural environment with rolling expanses of green mountains with crystal rivers and lakes running nestled throughout. This environment is what drew me to the state in the first place and what has kept me here for as long as it has. My best memories are with friends as we have explored the stunning outdoor atmosphere this state has to offer. If they are taken away it simply goes to say that Vermont is choosing to stand as a state that only pretends to care as opposed to one that truly does. While the capitalistic gain this one trade has to offer is vast, it will only be devastating the tourism industry that is the main reason people come to this remote state to begin with. Equal access to technology as a means of bettering communication, education, and advancements in medical aid are important, there are better ways in which to go about this that do not harm the ecosystems and endangered species that this state holds so dear.
