Comments: I'd like to show my support for the Rampart Range enduro skills area and beginner learning area. I'm an advanced rider and am constantly looking to improve my core skillset (navigating rocks, getting over obstacles, etc.). I also have three children, who all ride dirtbikes. With each, I have struggled to find a decent location to teach them the most basic skills needed. The current "beginner area" near Dutch Fred offers inadequate space to teach a true beginner, and my youngest is suffering because of it.

The Rampart Range trails are some of the most used trails in the state. I constantly see posts on various dirt bike forums/social media asking for a good location to learn how to ride a dirt bike near Denver, and there's never an convenient answer. Rampart's proximity to the metro area makes it a good candidate to be just that. The Rampart Range Motorized Management Committee is an excellent group who sponsors responsible ridership, the tenets of "Leave No Trace," and an appreciation of the outdoors on a motorcycle. I hope you will support their goals of creating a beginner and enduro training area.
