Comments: this project will do nothing but hurt custer in the long run. the environmental strain that this region has already had to deal with between fires and beetle infestations, and development by sale of land has already created environmental concern for the entire region. tourism is one thing, and rich people getting richer is another, but all i see here is greed from a Minnesota "collective" wanting to take advantage and exploit an environment, community, and culture for their own benefit. systematically, the growth and real estate in custer has turned into a detrimental bidding war only hurting the environment and the locals who have spent generations creating "custer" south dakota. no one from out of state/region should ever have the ability to create and finance such a project on this local soil. it would be a shame to see custer allow such development and exploitation of region for a rich collective to profit and exploit.
