Comments: To All Of You Who Hold Such Important Decision-making Authority:

I normally laud the PNTA and what it promotes, encouraging humanity to value our wilds and natural resources and reap its joy and rewards. However, I'm sincerely opposed to the contemplated northern route of the PNT -- instead of the southern routing -- where science and common sense, "relatively" insignificant financial burdens in the big picture, and avoiding the unique grizzlies on the northern route, all recommend the southern routing. Not a complex solution to otherwise complex circumstances and more beneficial to all concerned.

At age 63, I've hunted big and small game worldwide, fished, hiked throughout NAmerica, skied mountains, biked woods, run dogs, been around grizz in Glacier and Yellowstone, and have been tracked by a few up close and personal in Alaska and Alberta. Can't we give the few of these apex wonders of everything wild an enhanced chance to survive amidst us. Instead of, once again, depleting their home and plodding with our footprints forever just because we can. Thank you and Respectfully Submitted.
