

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 4/19/2023 7:01:35 PM

First name: Barbara

Last name: Rosenkotter

Organization:

Title:

Comments: The Forest Service should not use a Categorical Exclusion to amend its Forest Plan. A Forest Plan amendment will have lasting and wide-ranging impacts, and should only be undertaken with rigorous analysis and public feedback.

The Forest Service should make every effort to relocate trails in Wilderness within established trail corridors. All trail relocation work in Wilderness should be completed using traditional skills and tools, rather than motorized and mechanized equipment.

The Forest Service should drop its proposed Forest Plan amendment for the White Mountain National Forest as it considers how to address Wilderness trail management. Amending the Forest Plan to allow trail relocation throughout Wilderness could weaken protections for currently trailless areas, which help protect plants and wildlife, keep Wilderness from being overrun by humans, and offer a truly primitive experience or those who venture into these areas.

The Forest Service should instead conduct site-specific NEPA analysis for all trail relocations it proposes outside of established trail corridors in Wilderness, including for the Webster Cliff Trail. Trail relocation in Wilderness outside of designated trail corridors is an exception to the WMNF's Wilderness plan, and looking at trail relocation on an individual basis allows for better analysis of impacts to Wilderness.