

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 4/27/2023 12:13:01 PM

First name: Dan

Last name: Butler

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Hello,

My thanks for getting this going!

I would just like to suggest that this area might include some trials sections for trials riding. I feel that most new riders should start with a trials type of type skill set, learning balance and control before adding speed. This is the right environment to learn log hopping for example, proper technique being the essential goal, building confidence and defeating intimidation with appropriate skill building.

This need not be on a trials type motorcycle only. The designated section could also progress to include some more advanced sections for advanced riders wanting an area to ride trials.

Not a lot of real estate is required for this and could appeal to a wider group of riders while providing a nearby place to challenge themselves while they train a newer rider on the easier skill building terrain. I know from personal experience, it is difficult to mix all the different rider levels in one area, in my case training my wife learning to ride while still finding my own challenges in the same area.

Trials is the answer, such a great beginning angle and a humbling sport.

I also feel an area behind Sprucewood could be also be good for this and provide relief from the crowds of the busier areas especially on weekends.

Thanks again for listening!