Comments: Why would you want to jeopardize our water? We only have so much fresh water, once that is contaminated what will we do then? Just look at Arizona and California, ask those residents what it is like to have limited water supply? I would like to think that educated people in government positions would find this a no brained. Fresh water is more important than minerals or geothermal exploration. I'm sure there are some studies that show the water won't be harmed, but history shows studies can be altered to suit big company purposes. It's not worth the risk because there will be no going back once the water is polluted.
