Comments: We are on a velocity for older age stands almost entirely. Here we have a unique opportunity for a productive harvest that will benefit wildlife for a very, very long time.

This harvest represents a tiny fraction of what could otherwise should occur to create a mosaic's balance in the forest landscape. Early succession habitats are nearly void in the public forests and the decline in species such as ruffed grouse are absolutely reflective in this trend.

We should broadly support this prescription and far more like it....
