Comments: I understand the need to reduce the risk for wildfire, but just hope that it is done in a way that doesn't ruin the beauty of the area. The mysterious log piles that appeared on the trails near Rainbow Lake a few years ago are an example of a good idea that might have gone wrong.

From a recreation standpoint, I'm most excited to hear that there will be more trails for fat tire biking and improved/additional wayfinding signage.

We chose Frisco over other Colorado towns because of the trail system. Thank you for continuing to give those trails the attention they need for future generations.
